

The argument put forth by those who support deregulation of media ownership has no basis in fact. Every time media , or any regulations supporting the public interest have been loosened or eliminated. It is the average U.S. citizen who suffers by being denied a diversity of voices, opinions , goods and or services. History lessons are all too conveniently forgotten in the quest for the almighty dollar.